7 Things You Should Know Before You Replace Your Roof

When it's time to replace your roof, there are plenty of considerations to be made to ensure that you make the right choice. These are the 7 things you need to know before you replace your roof.

1. Is your contractor licensed and insured?

It's important to find a contractor with the right credentials. T. Reynolds Roofing's team is fully licensed and insured. That means our expertise is guaranteed and there are no liability issues for you.

2. Are they going to remove your old roof?

It's never a good idea to put new shingles over an existing roof. We completely remove your old roof and inspect for water damage underneath. We also clean up your yard and discard all parts of your old roof after the replacement.

3. Is there water damage beneath your old roof?

You should inspect your attic before you get your roof replaced. If there is visible water damage, you should consider that the cost to replace will likely be higher.

4. What type of roof do you want?

Roofs are made in different styles and with different materials. The type of roof you select will impact the cost of your project. We can help walk you through your options to choose the roofing material that will best fit your needs and budget.

5. What is your budget?

Roof replacement isn't a cheap project. Let your contractor know what your budget is before you get into any paperwork. We can help you select the best option within your budget.

6. Will your contractor provide an estimate?

Don't start a roof replacement project without a written estimate, otherwise, you could end up paying more than you expected. We provide free estimates for every roofing project we do.

7. Does it come with a warranty?

Your new roof should come with a solid warranty to guarantee that your investment lasts. Everything T. Reynolds Roofing LLC does is backed by a strong warranty.
